STATE ISSUES TOPIC OF DAVEY TALK AT FAIR

Nominee for Governor Assails Last Ohio Legislature in Marion Address

HITS TAX MEASURES

Names Conservation as One of His Prospective Policies If Elected

Outlining the reasons why he wants to be governor of Ohio, Congressman Martin L. Davey, of Kent, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, addressed Marion county fair visitors yesterday afternoon.

In an address lasting scarcely 20 minutes, the candidate outlined his reasons for seeking the office and assailed recent state legislatures for the added tax burden placed on Ohio taxpayers.

The last legislature, the speaker said, enacted four laws which directly affect the pocketbooks of Ohio taxpayers. He outlined them as the laws increasing the tax on gasoline, corporations and life insurance premiums and the state levy of six-tenths of a mill.

He flayed a previous legislature for passing the law requiring the revaluation of all real estate in Ohio. The revaluation, he said, was not made to decrease taxes but to pour more money into the coffers of the state.

Outlines His Program

In his reasons for wanting the office of governor the congressman stated that he wants to be part of the living forces of his time and that he likes the processes of government. He wants to give the state a comprehensive program for conservation of timber, waterways, minerals, fish and game, and other natural resources. It is his hope, he said, to be able to introduce into the state a program of conservation that he has been working out in Washington in recet years.

Ohio has been a backward state to far as conservation of natural resources is concerned, he said. What the state needs in a definite program of conservation.

Davey pledged his efforts to reduce the cost of state government without impairing its service. Service, he said is one of the two excuses for the existence of government. The other, the speaker stated is to protect organized society.

Appeal to Farmers

The candidate made a bid for farmers' votes when he outlined his Turn to Page 5

DEALERS PLAN FOR LOCAL RADIO SHOW

Program at Crystal Lake Park Pavilion Is Set for Sept. 27, 28 and 29

Preliminary plans for a radio show, the first to be held here, have been made by Marion radio dealers for Sept. 27, 28 and 29. The program, as outlined at this time, includes various entertainment features in addition to displays by practically all of the city's dealers. The show is to be held at Crystal Lake Park pavilion.

There is probability, the committee in charge announced today, that the program of entertainment will be broadcast through a special hook-up with some licensed broadcasting station.

One of the leading radio orchestras will be engaged for concert and dance programs and the entertainment will also include several acts of Keith vaudeville.

The plan is to hold the show the three nights of the scheduled dates.

MYSTERY DEEPENS

Chief of Police Asserts Body Not That of Harold Smith

Zanesville, Sept. 15—The mystery surrounding the death of the unidentified man whose body was found in a wooded ravine in Norval Park, southwest of here, deepened today with the statement by Chief of Police Joseph Petet that "I do not believe the body to be that of Harold Smith."

For a time the body was unidentified. Then it was stated the body was that of Harold Smith, 35, mine guard at the Webb coal mine, Shadyside. And now Petet has upset the latest identification by pointing out that Smith's hair was dark while the hiar on the head of the unidentified body is of a sandy texteure.

Two bands played and a crowd of madri gras celebrants cheered Mrs. Huddleston enthusiastically this morning when she passed Fourrier's record.

Dates for Next Year Are Set as 78th Annual Fair Program Is Concluded Here

1929 Marion County Exposition To Take Place Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13, Board Decides at Meeting; Cow Calling Contest Feature of Friday's Entertainment

As the seventy-eighth annual Marion county fair drew to a close yesterday afternoon plans for the exposition next year were being laid.

At a meeting of the fair board yesterday afternoon Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13 were selected as fair days for 1929.

High spots on the program yesterday were an address by Martin L. Davey, Democratic candidate for governor, a three-race speed program and the parade of livestock entered in the horse and cattle departments.

Music for the races yesterday was furnished by the Grand Prairie band. The Prospect band furnished the music Thursday and a band composed of members of the Marion musicians union here played Wednesday.

Wins as Cow Caller

It took a professional man from the city to beat the farmer at his own game yesterday afternoon when a nickel-plated cow bell was offered to the best cow caller at the fair. The voice of Dr. J. G. McNamara, Marion physician, who entered the contest by request, was judged to have qualities most pleasing to the bovine ear. He was awarded the prize bell. Dr. N. Sifritt, Marion county health commissioner, acted as judge.

The champion calf club steer shown at the fair brought the top price of $24 a hundred pounds when offered at auction with other club calves yesterday afternoon.

The calf was raised by Ralph Bender, of Waldo. Another steer raised by the Waldo youth also won first prize at a Cleveland livestock show last winter.

Ton Litter Sold

The ton litter of pigs owned by Robert Denzer, of Waldo, sold at the same sale at a price of $13.25, which is 25 cents above the current market price. The litter was bought by the Marion Stock Yards Co.

There follows a list of other calf owners, with the sale price, in the order in which their entries were placed in the judging:

Clifford Strine, Waldo, $18.75; Lowell Keats, Agosta, $18.50; Joseph Isler, Prospect, $17.50; Inez Kraner, Claridon, $17.50; Owen Strine, Waldo, $16.25; Walter Bender, Waldo, $16; Georgia Kraner, Claridon, $17.50; Ava Strine, Waldo, $16; and Rudolph Isler, Prospect, $16.75.

BOBBY JONES NEARS FOURTH AMATEUR TITLE

Atlanta Flash Has Lead of Six Up Over Perkins at End of 18 Holes

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

Brae Burn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15 — Bobby Jones virtually assured himself of his fourth national amateur golf title in the last five years by taking a lead of six up over Tom Perkins, British champion, at the end of the first 18 holes of the final round today.

Perkins, like most of the others who have essayed to halt Jones' triumphal marches to fame, if not fortune, blew up badly during the morning's play, winning only two holes during the round, while losing three in succession from the fifth to the seventh inclusive and four successively from the tenth to the thirteenth.

He was hardly any more match for Jones' mastery than was John Beck, another Englishman, who lost to Jones in the third round, or Phillips Finlay, beaten in the semi-finals yesterday.

Exclusive of the first hole, where Jones hadn't quite found the range yet, and the last four holes, which were halved, Perkins simply didn't belong in the same round with Jones, twice being forced to pick up and taking a pair of sixes on two other holes.

Jones' morning medal round was a 72, thirty-seven out, including a six on the first hole, and 35, back, two under par for this nine. This display on the last nine included six pars and birdies on the tenth, eleventh and thirteenth.

The cards follow:

Jones: Out 6-4-4-4-5-3-4-3-4—37
Perkins: Out 4-4-4-x-6-x-4-3-5—x
Jones: In 4-3-3-4-5-4-4-4-4—35—72
Perkins: In 5-4-4-6-5-4-4-3-4—39—x

Perkins knew he was fighting a losing battle from the moment he reached the turn, three down. Still he gave a sporting fight to the unequal task of Turn to Page 5

COMMISSION GRANTS GAS STATION PERMIT

City Board Overrules Objections to E. Center st. Business Project

The Roxanna Refining Co. was granted the right to construct a filling station on the southeast corner of East Center and Baker sts., at a special meeting of the city planning commission in the office of Mayor Earl Hazen, last night.

Objections of nine residents living in the vicinity of the site of the proposed station were overruled by the commission in granting the right to the Roxanna company. Several of the objectors who filed a protest with the commission were present at the meeting.

In the discussion relative to the proposed station it was stated that Harry Scribner, owner of the site, agreed to sell the lot on condition that a filling station be built there. A. C. Bachman, owner of the lot directly east of the Scribner lot, stated he had an opportunity to sell if a filling station was not constructed on the corner.

Bachman's objection, along with the protests of eight other residents who stated the filling station would be detrimental to their properties, were overruled by the commission.

Plans for the filling station presented by the Roxanna company were accepted by the commission.

FEAR STORM DEATH TOLL TO REACH 50

Thirty-Two Now Known Dead While Thousands Are Homeless and Facing Disease; Property Damage Up in Millions

TWISTER SWEEPS THROUGH ROCKFORD, ILL.

Eight Industrial Plants Collapse and Bury Unknown Number of Workers; Worst Tornado in Years Strikes Porto Rico

By International News Service

DEATH, disease, destruction and desolation were the gaunt four horsemen riding in the wake today of one of the worst storms in the history of the country.

Thirty-two are known dead and possibly the total may reach 50 lives, million of dollars in property damage, thousands homeless and facing disease, privation, misery and famine.

Seventeen persons lost their lives in Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota yesterday before there swept into Rockford, Ill., a howling wind maelstrom which shook the city in its merciless grasp leaving behind scenes of chaos.

Eight industrial plants collapsed, burying an unknown number of workers. Fifteen are known to be dead and more buried beneath tons of twisted steel and mortar. Twelve hundred are homeless.

Tens of thousands are homeless in Porto Rico following a tornado, the worst in many years. Frantic calls for aid have been sent out by the governor of the island to avert threatened famine and disease. No deaths have been reported but because of impaired wire facilities remote places in the island have been unable to communicate with San Juan.

While Rockford and Porto Rico still staggered under the gigantic freak of nature, hundreds in the middle west attempted today to rehabilitate themselves following the wind storm of early yesterday.

STRUGGLES TO RISE

Tornado Tears Through Rockford, Leaving Trail of Misery

Rockford, Ills. Sept. 15—Spent and gasping, Rockford struggled grimly today to rise from the tons of twisted wreckage beneath which her entire factory district lies buried.

It still is too soon to count the cost in lives, property and anguish exacted by the worst holocaust in the city's history. Like a mythological monster, the black funnel-cloud sucked her into a diagonal path from 50 to 200 feet wide for two miles through the southeast section of the two.

There are fifteen identified dead. But any of the eight brick industrial plants which collapsed like cardboard before the breath of the tornado was today a cemetery of uncounted living dead.

In Plant B of the Rockford Chair and Furniture Co., where rescuers worked all night in the eerie light of improvised beacons and flashlights, 15 men are known to be buried.

1,200 Are Homeless

Twelve hundred are homeless. It is a bitter, ironic phase of the catastrophe that these homeless ones are deprived, by a single ruthless stroke, of both shelter and livelihood, since most of them are workers in the factories near their homes.

The number of injured was estimated by authorities today at 200. Property damage, at first believed to amount to $25,000,000 is actually only $5,000,000, a check today showed.

Three hundred homes were either whirled into gaunt masses of wreckage Turn to Page 5

SMITH TO MAKE SCORE OF STOPS ON FIRST TRIP

Governor Revises His Tour and Will Visit Many Smaller Towns

BY GEORGE N. HOLMES
Star Staff Correspondent

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 15—Governor Smith broadened the scope of his western tour today.

Instead of stopping only at the half dozen large cities of the west where he is scheduled to deliver major speeches the Democratic nominee will stop as well at a score of smaller towns in Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado, the corn growers of Nebraska, the wheat farmers of Kansas and the oil workers of Oklahoma—all will have an opportunity to see—and possibly hear—the New York governor.

The itinerary of the governor's western tour has been completely revised. None of the major dates has been changed, but there has been added a score of stops for his special train which were not contained in the original schedule made public 1 days ago.

Plans Many Stops

Governor Smith has yielded to the importunities of his campaign managers that there is a real chance of striking a telling blow in the grain belt and the revamped schedule is the result.

Governor Smith will make three stops in Nebraska, 14 in Kansas, three in Oklahoma, and four in Colorado, under the revised schedule announced today.

Kansas is the native state of Nebraska Charles Curtis, the Republican vice presidential nominee. It is traditionally Republican, being one of the Turn to Page 5

HOOVER GOES AFTER SOLDIERS' BALLOTS

Nominee Ignores All Appeals for Denunciation of "Whispering" Attacks

Washington, Sept. 15—Ignoring all appeals for a personal denunciation of "whispering" attacks on Gov. Alfred E. Smith, his Democratic rival, Herbert Hoover today turned his attention to plans for winning the soldiers' vote to the Republican cause.

The Republican nominee invited to luncheon members of the Republican Service league, comprising veterans who served in the World war. All chairmen of the organization in eastern states were called here for a conference first with Dr. Hubert Work, the national chairman and then to attend the Hoover luncheon.

Among those attending the conference were Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Col. E. J. Kelly of Connecticut, Col. D. John Markey of Maryland, Col. William J. Keville of Massachusetts, Orville E. Cain of New Hampshire, Col. Franklin D'Olier of New Jersey, Maj. Albert S. Callas of New York, Allen Adams of North Carolina, William J. Whitehouse of Rhode Island, E. C. Greer of Tennessee, Col. H. Nelson Jackson of Vermont, and Casey M. Jones of West Virginia.

The league has begun organizing in all states for the purpose of getting veterans to vote and to vote for the Republican ticket.

TEACHER CONVICTED

Man Who Shot Stenographer's Husband Faces Prison

Pittsburgh, Sept. 15 — Fayette J. Tyrrell, Sunday school teacher who shot Philip Clark, husband of his stenographer, to death in the First Christian church, Mitchell, Pa., last May, was found guilty of second degree murder by a jury verdict returned in criminal court convened here today.

The conviction carries with it a 10 to 20-year sentence under Pennsylvania law. Tyrrell drew a revolver and shot Clark to death in the church because he feared Clark would kill him. Tyrrell was acting in self-defense, Mrs. Clark to a divorce suit then pending. Mrs. Clark came to his defense in his five-day trial.

Exit Signal is Posted for Straw Hats Today; Rush for Felts on at Stores Here

TODAY is a day of significance, at least for men in this section of the country.

It is the day when the curtain falls on Act 2 and prepares for the curtain rising of Act 3 in the drama of the seasons.

And in the language of the showmen, it is "exit straws—enter felts."

For, Sunday, straw hats will be as useful as a diving suit on the Sahara.

Yes, gone now are the days for relief from the heat to the bald heads through the use of the toppiece woven from the straw stack. And tonight, gone too, will be the hats into hat boxes until next spring.

Even today, the last day of the season, only a few of the straw hat wearers had the courage to don their summer "lids." Straw hats today were scarce and Sunday will be entirely extinct, if fashion's edict is observed.

The rush for fall "bonnets" began at the local "batteries" this week and today dealers were swamped for felts.

Expect Biggest Fair in Morrow County History Next Week

FINAL PLANS MADE FOR ANNUAL EVENT

Exhibits To Eclipse Those of Previous Years, According to Forecast

PRIZES TOTAL $5,638

Race Program Arranged at Mt. Gilead Expected To Draw Large Attendance

Mt. Gilead, Sept. 15—Last-minute preparations for the Morrow county fair, to be held Sept. 18-21, have been made by the county agricultural society, and everything is in readiness for what is forecast as the most successful fair in the county's history. Exhibits already promise to eclipse all previous displays and more interest is being shown this year in the different departments than ever before, officials report. The fair draws a larger percentage of the people of Morrow county together than any other event, and the committees in charge have made every possible effort to provide adequate entertainment.

A total of $5,638.50 is offered in prizes this year. A special $75 prize has been offered for the best Grange exhibit in the county, and the different Granges are actively engaged in preparing attractive displays. The schools, under County Superintendent H. O. Hanna, have been busy preparing their exhibits, while Secretary Lloyd Dye announces that the 4-H clubs of the county will occupy nearly twice the exhibit space of previous years.

School Parade

On Friday school children of the county will assemble at the local school grounds and, headed by bands, will march to the fairgrounds, where they will be admitted free of charge. They will march around the race track and halt in review in front of the grandstand, each school showing separately. School is being dismissed two days for this event.

An attractive race program has been outlined by the board and is expected to attract race followers from all central Ohio. The program is: Wednesday, 2:24 trot, purse $350; 2:24 pace, purse $350. ### Teams Fail To Show Championship Form in Six-Inning Game

BY KARL R. M'ELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

It happened last night at Lincoln park and in such a way that fans today are wondering whether it was just a nightmare or actually a little world series contest.

Putting up a performance that was far from what could be expected from teams representing the best soft ball talent in Marion, Calvary and the Eagles are now tied for the city championship with a win and a loss in each of their credit columns.

Not that it has anything to do with the story it might be well to mention that the Eagles won over Calvary, 4 to 3 in a six-inning contest. The fray was played before the largest crowd of the series this season.

Nother Game Ahead

To get matters all straightened out it will be necessary for the two teams to meet again Monday night when the championship will be settled for another season.

To see exactly what happened in the game it would be necessary for a person to have about six pairs of eyes. It was action and action only that the two teams gave the fans with the unexpected always happening.

It ranged from two men occupying the same base at the same time to intentional passing of heavy hitters. Then all around it was an interesting game if not so sound from a technical standpoint.

Honor in First

The Eagles opened up in the first inning with one run when Lattimore knocked out a home run to left field with the bases empty. Not satified with doing ahead, the Eagles pulled a motherly love act and gave the churchmen a counter through two errors.

Friendly relations were broken off in the second and both teams went scoreless. Rice was touched freely in the third, Calvary getting four of their five runs of the game to score two runs.

Gruber failed to enter into the spirit of the thing until the fifth inning when he issued three bases on balls, one of them coming when the bags were already populated. Rice and Roseberry were mixed in their base running and a time or two later both were attempting to gain possession of third base. To settle the argument between these two he will peg to third, which would have caught both runners, allowed Rice to score. This ended the game as far as Calvary was concerned and for the next inning and a half both teams went scoreless.

Hurling Good

Both hurlers pitched good ball each allowing five hits. Rice was a little wild on the steady order while Gruber was all at in the pinches. Bacon arrived on the field too late to start on the mound so was shunted to short.

The scores:

HE'S THE MINORS' BEST BUY

Charles Gelbert, shortstop of Rochester, N. Y., team of the International League, who is considered by scouts and managers to be the "best buy" in minor league baseball. The Rochester owners have put a price of $100,000 on him and it is probable he will go to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Ohio State Football Team Out For Opening Practice

COLUMBUS, Sept. 15—Initial practice of the 1928 Ohio State varsity football squad began here today with about 80 candidates on the field.

Dr. John W. Wilce, director of football for the last 15 years, began his last season as the scarlet and gray mentor.

Leo Raskowski, All-American tackle and state star will be absent for a few days due to an infected finger, and Lincoln Cory, fullback candidate, wired athletic officials that he will be unable to report until next week.

As in former years, there will be two practice sessions a day. The first session will get under way at 9 a. m. and the second at 3:30 p. m.

Due to a resolution adopted by the athletic board last winter, there will be no team captain, but a leader will be named for each game. An all-year captain will then be chosen at the end of the season.

STEVE WATTS, fast trotter from the Dr. N. Siffrit stables, finished second in the 2:12 trot feature of the closing events on the Marion County Fair program yesterday afternoon.

With victory within reach in two heats, the Marion horse broke on the stretch and it took some fast driving on the part of McMillen to take second money. He won the second heat.

The race was won by Dr Strongworthy with Valentine up. The best time was 2:10¼.

The 2:12 pace was taken by Minnie Wallace who finished with two firsts and a fourth, Dorothy B, an outsider, took the final heat.

Sam Rotan was the only racer to win in straight heats taking the 2:24 trot. Janie B finished second with a third and two second places.

50,000 FANS EXPECTED TO WITNESS FUTURITY RACES

New York, Sept. 15—More than 50,000 turf enthusiasts are expected to witness the thirty-ninth renewal of the Futurity stakes, which carries with it the two-year-old championship title. Twenty-four of the best two-year-olds in the country were entered for the $101,150 prize which will be the winner's share of the $127,550 purse.

Blue Larkspur, owned by Colonel E. R. Bradley, was a 3 to 1 favorite.

The export trade of the United States in the second quarter of 1928 reached a higher value than in any second quarter since 1920.

Fans Find Task Hard To Select All-Marion Team

THE task of selecting nine players from four teams participating in the little world series to be given berths on The Star's All-Marion recreation ball aggregation is no little job, according to a large number of fans who have sent their nominations to the sports editor.

With the Eagles winning last night's love affair with Calvary, fans will be given another chance to surge material from which two of the leading teams are composed. Rice is expected to draw a considerable number of votes from his showing on the mound during the last two games in which the Eagles have participated.

Don't forget to send your votes to the sports editor of The Star before next Thursday. The contest ends Wednesday night.

FINAL SERIES FRAY TO START EARLIER

In order that darkness will not interfere, the final game of the little world series to determine the recreation ball championship of Marion will start at 6 o'clock Monday night.

In a conference with President John Clark of the recreation ball commission, managers of Calvary and the Eagles reached the agreement last night. This is 10 minutes earlier than other contests were started.

TO MATCH THOMPSON WITH YOUNG CORBETT

Series of Fights for Titles Scheduled in Boxing World

New York, Sept. 15—As a result of the trick decision that deprived Sergeant Sammy Baker of his long deferred shot at the welterweight title, the rival California claimants, Young Corbett, the third, and Jack Thompson, will be matched at Madison Square Garden to produce a fresh challenger for Joe Dundee.

Tom McArdle, Garden matchmaker, is negotiating for the match and if Corbett and Thompson cannot be brought together then Thompson will probably get the title bout.

Tony Canzoneri has signed to defend his featherweight title against Andre Routis, of France, on Sept 27 at the garden.

The distance is 15 rounds.

Tommy Grogan, Omaha lightweight slugger, and Joe Glick are the headliners on Oct. 5. Distance 10 rounds.

Sammy Mandell is making the lightweight limit for Jimmy Goodrich at Flint, Mich., on Sept. 24. Mandell will thus put his title on the line but will not be taking much of a risk as Goodrich never was in Sammy's class as a boxer.

In one way this is a sort of a grudge match. Goodrich eliminated Mandell from the lightweight tournament here three years ago when he won on a foul—the only one that appears on Mandell's record. Goodrich went on to win the tournament and title.

NEW COURSE RECORD FOR WOMEN SET BY MRS. K. M. BOWER

UNITED STATES-ARGENTINA POLO MATCHES MOVED UP

Glen Cove, N. Y., Sept. 15—The start of the international polo matches between the United States and Argentina has been postponed from Sept. 22 to Sept. 29 because of the failure of the Argentine ponies to convalesce from their recent illness, according to an announcement made public today by the United States Polo association.

SWIMMER ENTERS

Delaware, Sept. 15—J. Langley Plymale, Gallipolis, champion Ohio river swimmer, entered Ohio Wesleyan university here today as a freshman. Plymale set a new record for the upper Ohio river this summer when he swam a distance of 20 miles in eight hours and 30 minutes. He is expected to be a strong addition to the swimming squad at Ohio Wesleyan.

FANS ARE EXPECTING FAST GAME SUNDAY

Columbus Colored Keystones To Play Eagles at Lincoln Park

Fans are looking forward to some real baseball Sunday afternoon when the Marion Eagles and Columbus Keystones clash at Lincoln park.

With the Ohio colored champions fighting to regain some of their lost prestige taken when they were defeated by the locals some time ago, one of the hardest fought frays of the season is anticipated.

With the exception of Sailor Sharrock, the Eagles will use the same lineup that defeated Richwood last Sunday. Tomorrow's game is called for 2:30 o'clock.

STARS IN GAME

Dick Kennedy Makes Unassisted Triple Play Against Lima

In a baseball contest between the Lima Lawyers and the Ohio Service Drug Stores, the latter team won, 23 to 6. Dick Kennedy of Marion was the star for the victors, making an unassisted triple play. He also scored two runs.

GIANTS TRAIL CARDS ONE GAME; BRAVES LOSE 4 TWIN BILLS

St. Louis Defeats Phillies in Wild Contest, 12 to 6; Reds Lose

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—The National league race is now closer than the American. As a result of winning their fourth straight double-header from the Braves yesterday, the Giants trail the Carinals by only one game. The standing of the leaders:

| Club. | W. | L. | Pct. | G.B. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis | 84 | 55 | .604 | 15 |
| New York | 83 | 56 | .597 | 15 |
| Chicago | 82 | 58 | .586 | 14 |

Eight straight victories for the Giants in four successive playing days is quite a mark for pennant contenders of the future to shoot at. On the heels of a slump in which they last eight straight games, the New Yorkers went on a batting spree that raised the team batting average to .294, nine points above St. Louis.

Today the Giants face a stumbling block in Dazzy Vance, the Brooklyn ace, who has been trimming them consistently of late. The Cards play the Phillies twice and the Cubs have two games with the mangled Braves.

The American league scramble will get under way again today with the Yankees facing the Browns and the Athletics invading Cleveland.

Fitzsimmons and Scott hurled the Giants to 6-2 and 5-1 victories over Boston yesterday. Bob Smith started both games for Boston and was knocked out twice.

The St. Louis and Philly pitchers were as wild as a March hare, each team drawing seven passes and getting 12 hits. In the fifth the Cards scored six runs on six passes and one hit. Willie Sherdel of St. Louis was there like a duck in the pinches, however and the Cards negotiated a 13 to 6 win.

Burleigh Grimes hung up his twenty-fourth victory, tying Benton of the Giants, in pitching the Pirates to a 4 to 1 decision over Cincinnati.

Heine Manush of the Browns, who is making a belated bid for the American league batting crown, swatted a homer and a triple as the Browns were nosed out by the White Sox, 5 to 4.

WINS SENIOR TITLE

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 15—Dr. Charles H. Walter of Oakland, Cal., at the age of 61 is the champion golfer of the United States Seniors' Golf Association. His 158 for 36 holes was the best score made in the tournament just concluded here.

It is better to remain ignorant than learn things you shouldn't know.

Continuation of Progress in Important Lines of Trade and Industry Cited

Industrial stocks steady, railroad stocks strong, domestic bonds firm, foreign bonds inactive, cotton steady, grain firm, copper firm, sugar irregular, rubber steady, pig iron firm, and foreign exchange irregular.

BY W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

New York, Sept. 15—Most of the traces of yesterday's brief collapse of the amusement stocks had passed before the end of the first hour today, and all sections of the market were ready for a moderate rally. The moving picture shares recovered about five points each for the Warners and 2½ points for Fox Film, the oils resumed without interruption the forward movement which has been in progress since Wednesday and the railroad stocks were again in demand at the best prices of the week.

A favorable impression was created in the financial district by the weekend business summaries, which recounted the continuation of progress in important lines of trade and industry. Bankers and brokers held out the prospect of a 6½ or even a 6 per cent. call loan market next week, a more important immediate factor. Trading was somewhat restricted by the absence of operators and speculators in their observance of the religious holiday.

New York Central, Great Northern and other high grade railroad stocks led the upward movement in that section of the market. This is the harvest season for the railroads in more respects than one and the last four months of the year is the most important period of accumulation of railroad stocks. Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Southern Railway, Baltimore and Ohio and other standard dividend-payers advanced one to three points in confident manner. Equipment stocks were also well bough on the prospect of increasing business for the locomotive builders.

PEACH PRICES DROP HERE DURING WEEK

Customers Waiting for Decline Rewarded When Lake Crop Arrives

Marion customers who have been waiting during the entire season for a reasonable price on peaches found their efforts rewarded on the local fruit stands in the last week.

Large supplies lake peaches which appeared and flooded the markets the first of this week, were being quoted at prices which were found acceptable by all customers of the city.

Peaches selling at $1, the lowest quotation noted on the market so far this season, moved fast as they appeared here from the lake region orchards. The grade, however, was poor and small and in some cases still green.

Buyers of higher grade peaches were able to make their choice from many grades, selling from $1.10 to $2.75 a bushel. The lake region peaches replaced almost entirely the other varieties which have been prominent on the markets this season.

A rain in the cornfields north of Marion brought a good supply of sweet corn on the markets during the last part of the week. The ears were large and sold at 25 cents a dozen. Due to the lack of rain the corn supply dwindled a few weeks ago. Dealers expect the last of the corn season next week.

Among the new products appearing on the local stands during the last week were home-grown grapes and pears. The grapes entered the market sold at 15 cents a pound and the pears at three pounds for 25 cents. The grape supply was large and ready sales were reported in the city. The pears were small but sold steadily in a majority of the local markets.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

With the home grown season ended, dealers were having difficulty in getting a sufficient supply of sad and leaf lettuce and endive from other parts of the state for the local markets today.

Head lettuce prices increased today following a scarcity on the vegetable stands all week. Dealers were asking 25 cents for the largest heads and 20 cents for the smallest to be found on the market. Home-grown head lettuce sold at 10 and 15 cents a head a few week ago.

In spite of its scarcity, leaf lettuce was selling steady at 25 cents a pound and endive was quoted at 20 cents a pound, the same prices that prevailed before the end of the homegrown season.

Good supplies of celery were found on the markets today and sold readily at 10 cents a bunch. Most of the celery being sold in Marion markets at the present time is obtained from Willard, O., the home-grown variety having passed off the local stands early last week.

Pumpkins, of the Rocky Ford variety, appeared for the first time on the local markets today. The pumpkins, small in size, were selling at 15 cents each. Sales on the first supply was reported good in the city.

Cauliflower imported from western states sold at the highest mark reached this season on the Marion vegetable stands today. Most dealers quoted the western variety at 50 and 60 cents each. The grade was good and dealers reported heavy sales in spite of the high price.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Sept. 15 — Grains closed higher yesterday and acted at the end as if the markets were full of invisible strength. Too much selling may have been done at the present level and under it. A decided upturn in all the futures today may surprise shorts unpleasantly.

At the end wheat was up ⅝@⅝; corn was up ⅝@1⅝; oats were ⅛ higher to ⅛ lower; rye was up ½@1⅛.

All this week wheat has been pounding around near the bottom but gradually working upward. Its low point daily has been successively higher. There was plenty of selling that was easy to trace, but the buying was not obvious.

During this period the most bearish news has been disseminated. It failed to weaken the market as bears supposed it would.

Liverpool Strengthens

The Liverpool market sagged away, but neither our market nor Winnipeg would follow it downward persistently. Liverpool again yesterday was weak early, but toward the close it strengthened up quite decidedly. A higher cable this morning might be enough to start short covering in volume here.

Crop conditions and enormous supplies look as bearish as ever, but it is well to remember that the futures market is always discounting the situation far ahead of time. For the present, at least, it acts as if it has discounted the bearish situation.

Later the market may go lower than it has yet been, but that does not seem likely now until after there is a speculative readjustment, which probably would mean a sharp advance.

The same kind of strength that appeared this week to be developing in wheat also seemed to be apparent in corn. The strength in the September future gives an aspect of executive power to all the futures.

In spite of the fact that we are heading into a magnificent new crop, the market has been gathering upward momentum. Today there may be talk of frost in the corn belt before Monday.

If there is that might start active covering.

The bull clique in corn appears to be as confident they are right as ever, and they may get the whole market going their way for a time at least.

In the corn market, as in wheat, political talk will have an influence, perhaps, on a good many traders.

In the cash market low grades of wheat were 2@3c lower; corn was unchanged to 1½c off; oats were unchanged to ½c off; rye was ½@1c up; barley was steady.

Fair Officials Pose With Champion

Cloverleaf weighs just 300 pounds more than one ton. He tips the scales at 2,300 pounds.

The champion is owned by F. F. Isler & Sons, of Prospect. He was included in their exhibit of shorthorns at the fair.

Cloverleaf Defender is a blue blood of the cattle aristocracy. He not only has a high sounding name but a registry number in seven figures. On the official record of pedigreed shorthorns Defender has the number 1,216,766.

The ring in Cloverleaf's nose belies his real character. He is said to be as docile as a kitten. A 14-year old member of the Isler farm led him out of his stall for the picture.

HOLIDAYS

THE question of whether schools close for observance of certain anniversary dates notable in American history is a point on which there is a difference of opinion.

In some cities, classes are dismissed on Washington's birthday but many school authorities regard it as more fitting to hold the usual sessions and devote a part of the day to special exercises honoring the memory of the first president.

This is the view taken by Marion board of education members as well as practically all of the teachers. Dismissal of classes for the day gets no results as far as benefits to the children are concerned, it is maintained. They are much more likely to learn something regarding Washington and to be inspired by the record of his life through taking part in anniversary programs at the schools, is the opinion of local educational officials.

The speaker at last years commencement exercises here expressed regret and concern over what he referred to as an increasing tendency of the American public to regard the average national holiday as an occasion set apart solely for recreation and entertainment.

The purpose of national anniversaries, in his opinion, can be maintained only through the course adopted here in observance of Washington's birthday.

FIRST ON RADIO

SENATOR ROBERT L. ROHE, of Tiffin, who was a visitor in Marion one day this week, has the distinction of being Ohio's first "radio senator." He attained this rank two years ago, when, shortly after the general assembly convened, he was selected by station WAIU, Columbus, to broadcast activities of the legislature from that station.

One night each week, throughout the legislative session, Senator Rohe had a regular place on the radio program of the Columbus station. His reviews of the work of the house and senate were followed with interest throughout the state.

Previous to his election to the senate, Mr. Rohe served three terms in the House of Representatives, as representative from Seneca county. He is a candidate this year for reelection to the senate

STILL TRADING

HORSE trading days aren't over yet, if an occurrence on the streets of Marion the other day can mean anything.

An employe of one of the dairies in the city was taking a horse, a very old horse, which he fondly coaxed along by calling the name of "Nellie," down the alley on the east side of the courthouse. Some one leaned out of a window and in a bantering tone announced that he'd trade his machine for "Nellie." For a while the joking was carried along, but finally lead to the disclosure that the automobile was a Chevrolet sedan, in good condition The last heard of the conversation the horse owner and the automobile owner were in deep confab over the pros and cons of the proposed trade.

FORTUNE FROWNS

Reporters aren't the only ones who have "rainy days"—or so we decided the other day when we saw a forlorn little creature that had doubtless known better days, begging at the rear door of a local restaurant.

The little beggar, of the species familiarly called "Bull Dog pup" was wearing a coat effect of a brilliant purple embroidered in the letters, "Singer." Whether the noun referred to the name or position of the animal, is not known, but, vocalist or no, times were evidently not so good.

LEARNS RAPIDLY

THE public school system is doomed to a strenuous trial during the next 12 years, if indications from some of the "first graders" this year mean anything.

One Marion youngster just arrived at school age came home Tuesday at noon all tired out and when questioned lisped that he had been working all morning on an elephant and might get it done in the afternoon.

Suddenly his eyes lighted up and with an impish grin he asked a neighbor woman if she noticed where his two front teeth were out.

"Well," and again he lisped, "I can stick a pencil in there and flip it clear to the ceiling."

The woman was properly astonished to hear of such results after just half a day's schooling.

Headliners In Game

Hoover Known Wherever Calamities Are Known, While Opposing Party Picks Man "That Needs No Introduction," Is Will's Observation

By WILL ROGERS

So we will just sit back and watch the smoke fly.

ALL I know is just what I read in in the papers. And newspapers are at a mighty low ebb when they have to resort to Politics to keep em alive. Every four years we have Politics. Every seven years some people have the itch, in a malaria country every other day people are scheduled to have a chill, every forty years France and Germany fight, and there is just hundreds of these calamities that hit us every once in a while. But of all of them I think politics is really the most disastrous.

Churches Hit

It hits a country like a pestilence. There is no telling where it will hit. People that you would think was smart and would know better are sometimes struck by it, and when they are they are as dumb as the dumb ones. This year the churches are hit by it harder than usual. It has been the text of more sermons than the Lord's supper. A Minister can't pray without asking divine assistance in the election of his man. Before he says Amen he takes a poll vote. Half the contributions go into the campaign funds. The Saviour was never asked more imploringly to enter politics than he is this year.

Course we have these things every four years but we don't have em this bad. Most of the elections heretofore it dident matter much who was elected, except to the fellow drawing the salary, but this year we are due for a mental, moral and financial somersault. It just happened that they by accident named two men who were pretty well known to run this year. It generally takes to November to explain who each of their respective Candidates are. But this year each side went out and got a couple of headliners.

Made Cabinets Popular

Hoover is known wherever Calamities are known, a National Catastrophe without Herbert wouldent make the Editorial page even. He has fed more hungry people than Child's restaurants. He has been in Coolidge Cabinet ever since Coolidge was old enough to have a cabinet. He and Mellon have made Cabinets Popular. The Democrats even wanted to run him a few years ago on their side, but after looking them over and finding they had NO side at that time, why he just waited till he got a better offer.

Women To Vote

And the Democrats they went stark crazy this time and did the right thing, by nominating a man "That needs no introduction." He is a man that has worked steady even when his whole party was laying off. He seemed to have made himself so valuable that even the Republicans engaged him. He was born under the shade of Brooklyn Bridge, but he dident set in the shade long. He went out and got him a Political office, and every time he would see a little higher one with nobody sitting in it he would make a dive for it, and he has never had the chair pulled from under him yet. He is one emigrant in our Country that makes no claim of having arrived on the Mayflower. His father was a truckman and if he had lived he would have been kept busy just moving his son's Derby hats from one office to the next higher. He has defeated the Republicans in his home state so much that they don't Nominate a Man against him any more, they Draft him. They tell him, "You are not a Candidate, you are just a Victim."

So its on account of having these men run that is causing all this excitement. Women are voting who havent left a Bridge game that long in years. The voting booths wont be ballot boxes, they will be fashion parades. Milliners will sell millions of hats, just to be voted in. School children this year know the Candidates names. Children that ordinarily only know their fraternity yell. Why it dont seem like a Political election it seems more like a family quarrel. Thousands and thousands of new voters that dont know a ballot from a laundry slip will be trying to write down their votes on November 4th.

Both Good Men

Both are fine men and would run the country perhaps equally as well, but if you listen to either side you would think that for either opponent to get in would be a return of the whole country to Slavery, Free Silver, "empty dinner pail," Long skirts, bustles and suspenders. So thats what makes this the prize calamity of all political time. Why we have got people that are really taking the whole thing serious. They think a President has got something to do with running the Country.

So we will just sit back and watch the smoke fly. And here is a funny thing even the Vice Presidential Candidates are well known and great fellows. And Money, say that's the thing that is bringing the big response. The Democrats never had any money before, while this year they are right in the market for good A. No. 1 votes.

Somebody is going to make some money out of politics this year besides the politicians, and thats just what is making it an unusual political year.

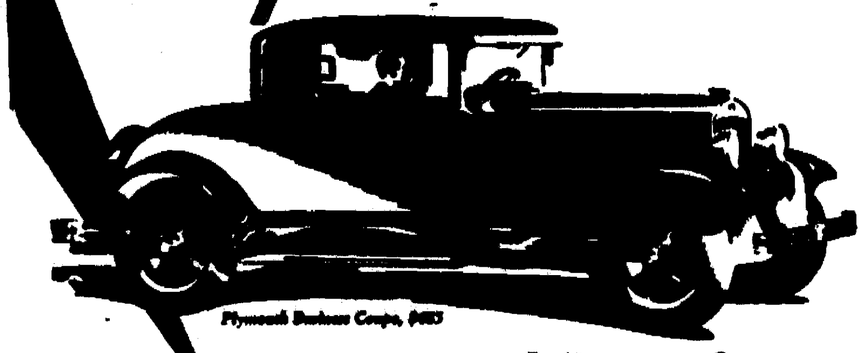
CHRYSLER
Plymouth


Winning public preference because of greater dollar value

With the arrival of the new Chrysler-built Plymouth the search for greater dollar value in the lowest-priced field is made surprisingly simple.
It is so unmistakably in a class by itself—with its full size, its new and original style, its fine quality of finish and fittings.
But the contrast in Plymouth's favor becomes still more startling in the matter of performance—in its speed, pick-up and power, from its new "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine using any gasoline; its smoothness and roadability; its safety because of light action internal-expanding hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.
The buyer who seeks dollar-value first will inevitably choose the new Plymouth, after observing the very significant contrasts in greater dollar-for-dollar value it presents to every other car in the lowest-priced field.

A row of 30 brick from the street car track to the curb on the south side of the street in about 24 seconds. That's Charley's time and he does it all day long, sometimes in better time but never in any less.

Charley's brick laying is as rhythmical as the tick of a 20-jeweled watch. He bends over his work at the car tracks and while laying four rows at the same time, never looks up until he has reached the curb.

Crowd Marvels

No group of persons could be more interested in the sprinting of Paddock than the crowd which collects on the sidewalk to watch the performance of Charley Smith.

Charley is a Chicago colored youth brought to this city by the P. Drake & Sons Co., contractors, especially for the purpose of putting the bricks in place on West Center st.

BANK CLEARINGS STILL ON UPGRADE

Total Transactions Here This Week Reported at $735,017

With the daily total for five days topping the $100,000 mark and the sixth day's sum amounting to $80,000, bank clearings here for the last week totalled $735,017.22, according to figures given out at the local clearing house, the Marion National bank, today.

The total for the week, although approximately $500,000 lower than the amount reported for the preceding week, is above the average sum for clearings at this time of the year. The total last week was $1,340,626.55, the huge increase resulting from distribution of the June taxes in the local banks.

This week's total is about $200,000 higher than the sum recorded for two weeks ago before the distribution of the taxes was started here. A large part of the clearings for this week, however, resulted from the transfer of funds from the office of the Marion county treasurer to the Marion banks.

The highest point for a single day during the week was reached Tuesday when $162,318.08 was recorded. Monday the clearing total was $132,107.16, the second highest for the week.

Other daily totals were: Friday, $122,921.40; Saturday, $111,817.00; Wednesday, $125,453.54; Thursday, $80,199.08.

LIBERTY BOND ISSUE COMES DUE TODAY

Maturing Government Securities Expected To Bring $500,000 to Marion County

Owners of the third issue Liberty bonds in Marion county were making arrangements for collection today, the maturing date for the bonds.

The third issue will bring approximately $500,000 into Marion county, according to estimates of the amount of bonds held here.

Three methods of collection are open to holders of registered bonds to obtain payment after today. The bonds may either be sent to the secretary of the treasury, where payment will be made direct to the bond holder, to the Federal Reserve bank, where the collection will be made for the holder or through a local bank, where payments will be placed in the account of the holder. By the latter method, the local banks will collect the payments through the reserve banks.

After today, coupon bonds will be recognized at banks and business houses for their face value. They may be used as tender. The coupon bonds may also be sent to a Federal reserve bank or to the secretary of treasury for conversion into money.

WOMEN'S ASSAILANT SOUGHT BY POLICE

One of Victims Near Lancaster Is Expectant Mother; Posse Makes Search

Lancaster, Sept. 15. Believed to be mentally deranged a slayer of vicious proclivities, an unknown man who has perpetrated two attacks on women in this vicinity, one an expectant mother, was still at large today although grim-faced men were re-directing a determined search with the expressed hope that "we'll have him by nightfall."

At 10:30 o'clock last night a man masked with a red bandana handkerchief, entered the home of Mrs. Ravenna Hayes, 37, here as she was cleaning in the kitchen. The woman screamed as her assailant clutched her. Then she fainted.

Her screams reached her husband who was in an upstairs room. He rushed down but the masked intruder had become frightened and fled.

The man was garbed in khaki trousers, blue shirt and a cap, the same clothing worn by the stranger who attacked Mrs. Perry Smith, about to become a mother, while she was alone at her home on Pleasantville pk., near here, Monday night.

A posse of farmers, national guardsmen and county officials, numbering 50 men, was quickly formed and scoured the countryside during the night but their search was ineffectual.

This vicinity is thoroughly aroused and the search will be extended and intensified, it was said here.

The Pentecostal Gift

A SERMONETTE

BY THE REV. G. E. WADDLE
Pastor, First Church of Nazarene

"YE shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."—Acts 1:8.

What a change came over the disciples when they were filled with the power of the Holy Ghost, on the day of Pentecost. No longer were the doors barred "for fear of the Jews," but instead they were possessed by holy courage and spiritual power that made their enemies take "knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."

Christ's promises became glorious realities, and "they went forth" and preached everywhere Heaven's message aflame by the sharp sword thrust of the Spirit by which sinners were pricked in their hearts and brought to know Christ.

What power was manifest on that day! Power to make the mountains of sin flow away into the sea of forgetfulness. Power to level the little hills of selfishness till the soul is one beautiful plain of harmony and fruitfulness. Power to cut a channel for the river of life and peace, ever flowing through this garden of the Lord. Power to wash the spirit whiter than snow, like the purity of Paradise, where birds sing, flowers grow and bloom and hope eternal springs from the soul of the soul.

The very atmosphere of this life-giving power is restful, luminous with the Light of the Sun of righteousness. All the joy of the first Eden is recreated where chaos and darkness had reigned supreme. "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound."

Many are the Scripture passages that express very forcefully the characteristics of this power, such as "endued with power from on high." "Filled with all the fulnes of God." David prayed, "Create in me a clean heart O God." Many of our hymns are only prayers for this purity of heart.

God's word lifts up an ideal we may all reach and our hymns sing of an altitude we may obtain. The great need of Christianity today, is not financial power, nor social or political power, but the power that came to the disciples on Pentecost.

"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."

First Presbyterian Church 100th Anniversary Plans Now Nearing Completion

Rev. Howard L. Olewiler To Be Assisted by Three Former Pastors in Special Services; Program Arranged for Sept. 30 and Oct. 1

Plans for the special services which will commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of First Presbyterian church are rapidly nearing completion.

The special services are to be held on Sunday, Sept. 30, the anniversary date, in the church auditorium.

The Rev. Howard L. Olewiler, pastor of the church, will be assisted by three former Marion pastors, Dr. Frank Granstaff, pastor here from 1903 to 1906, the Rev. Raymond W. Smiley, pastor from 1923 to 1927, and the Rev. L. L. Strock, pastor from 1913 to 1923. Dr. Granstaff will preach at night, Mr. Smiley in the morning and Mr. Strock will speak during the Sunday School hour.

Committee on Arrangements

Detailed arrangements for the entertainment are in charge of a committee comprised of W. N. Harder, John Bartram and J. G. Cooper. Special music will be furnished under direction of Charles Collmer, choir director.

A Congregational social and reception has been announced for Monday night, Oct. 1, as a part of the anniversary observance.

Word has been received that the Rev. George M. Rourke, pastor here from 1907 to 1913, will be unable to attend. Mr. Rourke is now located in Los Angeles.

Present members of the church actively associated in church functions for many years include Mrs. Anna Raffensperger, Mr. and Mrs. Jones Conclin, Mrs. Henry True and Col. George B. Christian.

Prepare History

Preparations for publication of a souvenir history of the church are being made by a committee comprised of M. A. Mickley and Charles F. Davison. Copies will be available with in the next two weeks.

First Presbyterian church was first organized in September 1928. Since that time the membership has grown from 15 persons to approximately 1,400.

From 1828 until about 1849 services were held in a frame building on North Prospect st., near the residence of Dr. H. L. Chler. This building had previously served the community as a courthouse and school.

In 1849 the church members purchased property on the east side of North Prospect st., now occupied by the Auto Inn garage, and a larger church of brick was constructed with a manse for the pastor. This building served the growing church and city for some 43 years.

The property on the northwest corner of the intersection of West Church and South Prospect sts. was purchased in 1892 and work of erecting the present church was completed in 1894. The property had previously been the site of a dance hall and theater. During the winter of 1925 and 1926 the entire church and Sunday school building was remodelled and enlarged.

matching strokes with the automaton and, if at odd times he succeeded, then all was not entirely lost.

However, he just didn't have it in him to match Jones' successive birdies at the tenth and eleventh to become 5 up and it was at this point that the match, in effect, simply ceased to be.

However, the lad with the spectacles and precise, scholarly demeanor, was in there to escape an utter rout, if possible, and after being seven down for 13 holes he rallied sufficiently to prevent Jones from winning another hole during the round He ever went so far as to win one for himself when Jones missed the seventeenth green with his tee shot, while at the eighteenth, he flittied very courageously to get his half in 4's.

Both were beyond the cross bunker with their drives but Perkins' approach lacked distance, although straight. Jones hit one of his typical long irons, the ball coming to rest 20 feet from the pin. Perkins replied with a run-up approach five feet from the flag, upon which Jones all but sank his tough, long down hill putt, the thing stopping an inch away. Perkins needed his five-footer for a half and proved his mettle by getting it.

However, even this meed of satisfaction was slight enough after the beating he was forced to accept.

FEAR STORM DEATH TOLL MAY REACH 50

or flattened down like pancakes by the fantastic whim of the whirlwind.

Those who are dead are Everett Cornmesser, 15; his cousins, Bernard, 14, and Virgil, 16, George Faberberg, Tony Martinkas and John Brunski.

Eugene Cornmesser, 12 year old brother of Bernard and Virgil, was with the other three boys when a house-roof suddenly settled on them as they walked along the street.

Air Full of Wood

He wasn't even scratched.

"I didn't see anything coming and didn't know what had hit us," the boy said. "The air seemed to be full of flying wood I scrambled out, but the others are still. I ran and got help."

"Why did we ever come here," moaned Mrs Oma Cornmesser, mother of Everett The family has just moved here from Iowa

The other mother, Mrs. John Cornmesser, doubly bereft sat stunned in her house in the heart of the stricken area.

Martinkas was a farm hand His body was found near a barn in the path of the storm.

Fagerberg's body was lifted from the ruins of a chair factory Bruski was also a factory worker He died in a hospital from his injuries.

Two Stories Telescope

That plant, where the wind seems to have wrecked its wildest fury, was a brick structure 300 feet long and four stories high It was lifted from its foundation, then set down again, with all but the two upper stories telescoped into the basement. Not a brick clung to the walls.

The scene outside the crazily twisted frame work that remained was awful, in the strict meaning of that misused word, as the massed forces of the sheriff's office, police and fire departments, Red Cross and miscellaneous volunteers made pitifully futile efforts to dig through mountains of brick, timber and machinery.

O. W. Johnson, superintendent of the factory, was pinned under a 14 inch beam for three hours.

"My son, Charles, rescued me," he said, on his cot in the Swedish American hospital.

"Charles is a bench worker in the factory When the twister came, he was whirled around about 15 times by its force, then blown out a window, clear of the buildings

Run for Stairway

"He joined the rescuers and he recognized my voice, calling I had been on the second floor when I saw the black funnel coming 'Quick boys a tornado!' I shouted and 15 of us rushed for the stairway. We were trapped there, lifted up by the wind and then dropped to the basement

"For a minute everything was still Then came groans The timber saved me from being crushed. Albin Swenson's body was pinned against mine 'You'll have to holler for both us,' he said, 'I can't' and fainted, so I hollered."

Relief workers have come from the neighboring towns of Beloit and Freeport. Capt. Warren Aldrich is in command of a company of militia patrolling the devastated area. The American Legion drum corps, completely accoutred even to the shining tin helmets they wear on parade, is at the scene.

Sheriff Harry Baldwin voiced the quandary of the rescuers

"It might cost several lives to venture into that tangle of debris to pull out one dead man."

FAMINE FEARED

Adds Dread to Plight of Thousands in San Juan

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 15—The spectre of famine stalked through the streets of this city today adding its dread to the dire plight of thousands made homeless by the most tropical storm ever suffered by Porto Rico.

Continued torrential rains since the passing of the wind are spoiling what ever stores of food remained after the tornado's visitation in addition the water supply of the city is badly disorganized and in some sections not functioning at all.

It is feared that these conditions may cause disease among the homeless victims of the storm According to Thomas E. Benner, chancellor of the University of Porto Rico, the meager food supply on hand will last only for a few days In cable dispatches to the United States he entreated immediate aid from all sources.

The tornado, now sweeping northward, may hit the coast of Florida today, it is feared Several vessels in its path have not been heard from, but officials of the companies owning them are not anxious. However, there is some anxiety for the safety of Franz Romer, the German seaman who crossed the Atlantic in a canoe and is now enroute from this city to Florida in his frail craft.

Scarcely a house in the city can be said to have escaped damage It is estimated that 90 per cent of the population is homeless. Business is at a standstill and communication between the city and other parts of the island continues difficult.

To prevent a possible drought due to the failure of the water supply system, natives are catching the rain in whatever utensils they can find among the ruins of their homes.

WEATHERMAN DROPS RAIN FROM PROGRAM

Forecasts Fair Sunday After Slight Shower This Morning

The tune "It Ain't a Gonna Rain No Mo'" popular a year or so ago, became of special significance to Marion folk today after a week of sunshine and only predictions of rain.

A shower early this morning, during which .05 of an inch of rain fell, failed to carry out the weather forecast of "increasing cloudiness followed by showers" today.

Even the weatherman has given up hope of rain and like the rest of us, is resigned to an empty cistern and wilted crops His prediction today is "fair tonight and Sunday, cooler tonight"

The highest temperatures reached here in several weeks was recorded yesterday when the mercury went to 90 degrees Last night the temperature dropped to the 65 degree mark About the same temperatures were recorded a year ago when an official 95-degree high and 66 degree low were placed on record.

Daily Proverb—"He who gives his heart will not deny his money."

Anyway, we will say this for Mr. Raskob; up to a late hour this afternoon he hadn't claimed Vermont for his candidate.

It's going to make a real news item when some distinguished patriot calls on either of the two old party candidates and fails to deliver the electoral vote of a state or two to him.

A stray note says that, as a result of its introduction by our soldier boys in France, all Europe is chewing gum. Only in the aftermath do we begin to appreciate the awful horrors of war.

Possibly the senatorial candidacy of Mr. Charles V. Truax might have more appeal were he to cease using the stationery of the Ohio department of agriculture, of which he is director, for the purpose of sending out his political propaganda.

Florenz Ziegfeld and a New York friend were fined $614 when customs collectors found 100 bottles of liquor, to which they acknowledged the ownership, aboard the private car of J. L. Replogle on which they crossed the Canadian border. It would be hard to imagine a couple of Main Streeters attempting to pull off as foolish a one as that.

Washington reports that the air mail carried in August weighed 418,821 pounds, almost double the 214,654 pounds carried in July, the new five-cent rate being credited for the increase. What early in its inauguration was called the dream of Postmaster General New manifestly has become a reality.

The mishap to the mail plane which hopped off from the Ile de France, Thursday, when the pride of the French line was still 800 miles at sea, goes to show that such flights are not without decided hazard. It's just as easy to be lost at sea a few hundred miles from land as it is in the middle of the ocean.

The Polish Monarchists have again offered to Marshal Pilsudski the throne of Poland, which he has repeatedly refused. Just as though a wise old bird like Pilsudski would give up what is practically a dictatorship to become a mere king!

Sailing for the United States, Ganna Walska left her jewels in her strong box in Paris, fearing that they might be stolen by Chicago bandits. Ganna's judgment may be questioned at times, but maybe it isn't so far off the mark in the present case.

What Art Told the President.

American press representatives, or whatever the glorified reporters who seek news at the White House and the Executive office may call themselves, have had one put over on them and by a Britisher at that. Beverly Nichols, the young author who has just returned to London from a visit in this country, not only reports that he succeeded in getting Mr. Coolidge to talk, but actually quotes the presidential utterances.

The young British writer admits that he had his troubles in accomplishing the near miracle. Attempt after attempt to start a conversation, he relates in an article writon by him for a London publication, was met with the presidential silence or an "Oh." Finally, despairing of getting the president to talk, he began to talk himself with the unexpected result set out. Switching from one subject to another, Nichols was telling the president of the state of mind in Europe, when he began to note that Mr. Coolidge was interested. He had just said that a shadow was cast over all Europe, and especially the younger generation, by the thought of future wars which produced a feeling of utter futility, when the president responded:

"I think I understand more clearly than you imagine what you mean. Not long ago I visited an exhibition of modern pictures at Pittsburgh. Almost every European nation was represented. As I looked at those pictures I felt I could see through them into the minds of the nations which had created them.

"I could see the torment out of which they had been born. If the nation's psychology was still diseased so was its art. The traces of neurosis were unmistakable. If, on the other hand, the nation was on the road to recovery, if its people were rediscovering the happiness which they had lost, the story was told in the picture too."

Nichols says the president paused here and then went on:

"I thought I observed as much evidence of recovery as of sickness."

"Do you mean to say," Nichols says he asked, "that you trace evidence of this unrest even in landscape?"

"Yes," was the response of Mr. Coolidge, "I think I do."

And now the entire White House press bunch is probably tearing its hair that it never thought of brushing up on European psychology and springing it on the president.

The County Fair Is Doomed.

The county fair as an exposition of the productiveness of the political division in which it is put on is doomed. We are not referring to the local county fair particularly, but to the county fair as an institution. It may struggle along as an annual event for a number of years, possibly for a decade or even longer, but if it does hold out for a considerable time, it will not be as a show of county products, but chiefly as the result of the entertainment it affords. And it is not impossible that the state fair may suffer the fate of the county.

There was a time when the fair was the big county event of the year. It was not alone a big agricultural, stock-raising, industrial, commercial, culinary and fine art affair, but something of a social affair as well. Distance meant a lot more back in the time we have in mind than it does now. The roads were poor, the methods of transportation were not so good and traveling was not so easy as it is now. Hence people did not travel about as they do now, and the county fair stood out as the occasion when people from all parts of the county and territory adjacent to it got into their wagons and buggies and drove to the fair to renew old acquaintances. They looked over each other's horses, and cattle, and sheep, and hogs. They took a peek at each other's grain, and fruits, and vegetables. And they exchanged notes on this, and that, and the other, and how to ge the best results in each line. And they assembled by thousands upon thousands for the big days of the fair. But they do not thus get together any longer.

The automobile has worked the change. The automobile has made it possible for people to drive about and see each other. There is no occasion for them to wait for a certain week to renew old acquaintances. And it has taught them something else. It has taught them that there is far more to be seen than can be offered by any county. It has annihilated distance and brought much before their eyes of which previously they had only read, and they have seen and enjoyed much of which, previous to the coming into general use of the automobile, they had never dreamed. Possibly they have gone to the extreme in this respect, but just the same they have traveled and seen such sights as they never expected to see.

And the farmer, who in the past has been the mainstay of the county fair, has not been the exception to this rule. He, too, is traveling, seeing the country near and far. Not long ago the writer saw a delegation of Ohio farmers —we were told there were 184 in the party— out in Yellowstone park. We know they were Ohio farmers only because they were designated as such, for they were not the caricatured farmers of the stage but as fine-looking, well-dressed and well-mannered lot of men as any traveling through the park. Their very manner proclaimed the fact that they were accustomed to travel, and for such the county fair has lost its appeal.

Recognizing the changed condition, fair managements are relying on entertainment features to prolong their existence, just as the local fair managements in going. They are putting on daylight air thrills and night pageants and fireworks and the relative drawing power of the night bills and the day may be judged by the attendance of Thursday night at the fairground which was easily half again that of the day.

Managements may deny the manifest fact, but the lack of interest shows that the county fair, in the old-time sense at least, is nearing its end.

The total exports of Britain for August exceed those of the same month last year by $14,038,230, and it was the fifth successive month in which Britain's exports exceeded those of the month preceding it, cutting down her adverse balance of trade from $1,299,000,000 for the first eight months of 1927 to $1,176,350,000 for the same period this year. Despite her many discouragements, Britain will probably again "muddle through."

Estimating that traffic delays cause a loss of $200,000,000 annually to London, the British ministry of transport is considering the exclusion of horse-drawn vehicles from certain streets or from all streets at certain hours. Just how far any government can legally go in legislation of this sort is open to question in the case of streets which are built and paid for by public money derived from taxes paid by horse and car owners alike.

We hope Aimee Semple McPherson will watch her step while abroad, and not wander off into some desert. Another story of a dreary trail in dancing pumps over hot desert sands, we are afraid, would be too great a strain upon our credulity.

Secretary Mellon told President Coolidge, a day or two ago, that the country as a whole is prosperous. The idea of a man so economical in the use of words wasting them on self-evident truths like that.

Hundreds of mothers in Brooklyn are up in arms because of an attempt to transfer their children to schools far distant from their homes, a plan the school authorities claim the crowded conditions of the schools makes necessary, refusing to permit children to be endangered further by trolley cars and hit-and-run drivers. No matter what the outcome, there is decided merit in the stand taken by these mothers of Brooklyn. Children should not be compelled to face the hazards presented by such a plan.

A Wisconsin man is suing to recover damages for the death of one of his cows which died as the result of injuries sustained when it became scared by the noise made by a descending airplane and broke through a barbed wire fence. We are without information on the subject, but it's our guess that the proof offered will tend to show that the cow in question was the most valuable animal of its kind in the entire state. Half a century of observation has convinced us that that is the only kind that ever figures in such damage suits.

SITTING PRETTY.

The Athletic Heart.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

In the first of these articles about the heart I told you that I had been asked to do them by a college president. He was worried considerably about his heart and I have tried to show that heart ailments are rarely a sufficient cause of worry. Most cases of "heart disease" are purely imaginary.

But, after all, of all men—college presidents should be informed regarding the functions, capabilities and limitations of the human heart. Multitudes of young men and women are under their care. These young people should be guarded against athletic excesses, worry, overwork, and all other varieties of excesses which make for heart disease.

I believe in football, handball, tennis, rowing, running, jumping and all sorts of track work. But violent sports, in which tremendous heart action is demanded should not be indulged in without knowing the state of the heart of the student who engages in them.

Keene Fitzpatrick is a very old friend of mine and I say truly that I believe Keene has done more to develop straight thinking than any college president of modern times. This statement is made with humble apologies to the teaching profession, but with conviction of soul that it is true.

Straight thinking depends on a clean mind and a clear brain. Nobody can have these without a clean body. To have a perfect body there must be systematic training of the whole man. It is that training Keene has done through these many years.

The farmer boy leaves home to go to the city. After a couple of years of the softness and self-indulgence of urban life, he goes home at harvest time. His old associates send him into the harvest field to pitch hay or bundles of grain.

His heart has grown flabby. Without systematic daily exercise, he is in no condition to put this terrible strain on the softened organ. Two hours of this exercise will do such damage to his heart as to make him an invalid for months, if not for life.

The heart will not tolerate such treatment. Never rush into violent sports or activities. Break in gradually. Then you will be safe and your heart will gradually assume strength and powers of resistance.

In the old days of misdirected, physical activities in college it was not uncommon for the graduate to find himself a poor insurance risk. It is discouraging, indeed, to be famous as a college athlete and then have to suffer the rest of one's days with an athletic heart.

The way to deal with these cases is never to have them. Supervision of college athletics is just as important as supervision of college studies.

I am sure my college president friend will agree with me.

HENRY FORD'S AMERICAN RELICS.

It is now revealed that Henry Ford is not disposed to abandon practical purpose, even when he rides one of his dearest hobbies.

Persons who have observed the manufacturer's activities in collecting a hodgepodge of relics representing the buildings, industries and early living conditions of Americans have wondered what Mr. Ford could ever do with such a collection, beyond resorting to expensive and unrevealing storage. Now they know. He will build a "museum village."

Just as simple as that, and just as practical—for a man of great wealth. Thus, a collector who can afford the extravagance can express a passion for originals of early American culture and implements, for historic buildings and furniture to repletion, and still feel that he is contributing to the knowledge of the present and future generations. For the "museum village" which he is going to build near his home in Dearborn, Michigan, will be educational in its purpose, according to information surrounding the subject in the Ladies' Home Journal.

The village will be made up of ancient and historical buildings Mr. Ford has purchased in many parts of the United States and even in England; houses and cottages and other buildings that have been taken down piece by piece and removed to Michigan for exact reconstruction. The furniture, household equipment and tools Mr. Ford has been gathering for several years will be properly placed in these settings and a village assembled that is as true to the era of the houses and relics as the varying degrees of their antiquity will permit.

And the village will be peopled and lived in, with as much assumption of color and attention to period as may be permissible in this age of the automobile, flying machine and mechanical refrigeration. The possibilities of the plan under the purposeful interest of Mr. Ford gripe the imagination. It will be progressive in its instruction, with sections of the village devoted to more modern developments, showing the advance of domestic and industrial arts. And visitors may feel that what they are shown is real, so far as the inanimate displays are concerned. The buildings and relics will be colonial, and post-colonial, not reproductions.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE EUGENIC BABY.

Miss Kate Pullman of the vaudeville circuit recently announced that she was the proprietress of an eugenic baby. The baby is eugenic, the announcement explained, because it hasn't got any paternal proprietor, he being merely a physiological incident selected for superiority in point of robustness and smartness.

Now, without assuming the role of administrator of the public morals, we point out to any young woman who may be of a mind to emulate Miss Pullman or to any young woman to whom some young man might appeal as a physiological incident, that it is difficult to rear a child who hasn't got an old man. Where, for instance, would this child be in the youthful debates precipitated by the boast, "My old man can lick the tar out of your old man." Would the fatherless child counter with equal gusto, "My physiological incident can lick the tar out of your old man?" We think not, for it is to be presumed that the eugenic baby is unaware of the identity of its physiological incident.

The revolution of marriage is still confined largely to talk among New York neurasthenics. The old system is still in vogue. All questions of morality aside, an illegitimate child is not accepted in the social scheme. The woman who fulfils her motherhood longing by entering into an arrangement for the birth of a so-called eugenic baby, is supremely selfish. The child, be he ever so eugenic, will have a bitter time of it.—Chicago Tribune.

Small Javanese States.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

Although the island of Java itself, is owned by the Netherlands, there are, in the center of the island, two self-governing states, known as Solo and Jokja. The real names of these states, almost forgotten but still official, are Soerakarta and Jokjokarta. Despite the fact that they are both very small—but 113 and fifty-six square miles respectively, their populations are, in the same order, over 1,600,000 and 1,000,000.

The King of Solo rules the first, the Sultan of Jokja the second. In both states a peculiar etiquet is recognized, medieval, formal, quaint, fantastic and picturesque. It is in these states, by the way, that the world-famous Javanese dancers are maintained. These dancers are chosen only from the relatives of the rulers, and are guarded and watched over as were the Vestal virgins of ancient time. They perform often, every holiday—which come along frequently—being a time for general rejoicing and a calling out of the srimpis and bedoyos, as they are known.

Incidentally, it is in these states that battek work—the weaving of cloth or silk without a loom—originated and still thrives.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Call of the Stars.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Now or never, if you are going to learn the stars, and, as Thomas Carlyle said, "make yourself at home in the starry heavens." He deeply regretted in his later years that he had not done that very thing, but he tried to make up for it by reading. He got on so well in that way that his reference to the influence on the mind of Mohammed of the electric brightness of the star, Canopus, gleaming like a watching eye over the Arabian deserts, is one of the most thrilling sentences he ever wrote.

In summertime and early autumn, study the stars. Then everything invites you in that direction. The cool of the evening, the steadiness of the atmosphere, the comfort of being out of doors, the fragrance of the fields and gardens, like the perfumed air of the theater —for it is the theater of the universe whose illimitable scenes are displayed before your eyes—how can any one then avoid lifting up his face to the evening sky?

If the full moon is there, she will be the queen of the spectacle, the prima donna, and the dimmed stars will be but coryphees surrounding her. But she passes on, "monthly changing in her circled orb," and within a few nights the sidereal glories again shine forth with undiminished splendor.

The Milky Way never appears so brilliant as in the summer and autumn. The great stars then are Arcturus, Vega, Antares, Altair, Formalhaut; the great constellations are Scorpio, Sagittarius, Orphiuchus, Bootes, Hercules, Lyra, Aquila, Cygnus—with the Northern Cross—Pegasus, Andromeda, Cassiopeia. Look them up in a star map, or, better, a planisphere, or, still better, join some local astronomical association—they are multiplying fast now—and make their acquaintance face to face. The stars surround the world; when you know them you are never lost and never lonely. They rise and set in their regular course over every land. They guide the sailor in all seas. They lead the explorer to the poles, for the sun itself is only a nearby star. For escaping slaves, and all fugitives, they have ever been as friends that take you by the hand and lead you in safety.

The intellectual influences of the stars are seen in the science of astronomy, which has always led the human mind. Their moral influence is like a miracle. If every prison cell had a window through which the stars could be seen circling quietly through the sky, thousands of troubled souls would be soothed and healed, and evil thoughts be driven away, if but for a time.

The whole human race, in every phase of social and moral development, is a witness to the truth that the contemplation of the starry heavens is the great medicine of humanity, marvelous in its soothing and comforting and restoring power.

"Through the transparent darkness," wrote Emerson, "the stars pour their almost spiritual rays. Man under them seems a young child, and his huge globe a toy."

Their lies the secret of their influence—they make us children again. They strip off all of our pretenses, arrogance and false pride, reduce us to moral nakedness under their light, and refresh us as with a purifying bath. In the presence of the universe we become aware at once of our real stature and of our true place in the sum of things. To many the call of the stars seems the only summons to immortality.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

authorities were apprehensive of an attack on City hospital where Jawarski lies, critically wounded.

Thursday, Jawarski killed Patrolman Anthony Wieczorek, wounded Patrolman George Effinger and a bystander, Benjamin Majstrek, before he was himself trapped in a house, wounded and captured. Vasbinder fled when the shooting began and has not yet been found.

Jawarski also told officers last night that the remnants of the old "Flathead Gang" of which he was once the leader, were in town, armed with machine guns and explosives. He intimated that Vasbinder would lead them in an attempt to free him.

Police About Bed

As a result, a cordon of police had been stationed around the hospital today. Inside, in the police ward, Jawarski's cot is constantly watched by police, with their guns ready for instant action. Downstairs windows and doors were kept securely locked last night.

Detective Inspector Cornelius Cody later decided to disarm the police who guard Jawarski's cot. He said he was taking no chances on letting the killer get his hands on a gun.

Jawarski led the "Flathead Gang" when it was the terror of western Pennsylvania. A number of sensational payroll robberies were staged by the gang, among them the famous $104,000 holdup near Mollenaus, Pa., when a payroll car was dynamited.

Friction Developes

Jawarski was later captured and convicted. Thirteen months ago, he and Vasbinder, both under sentence for first degree murder, shot their way out of the Allegheny county jail in Pittsburgh, and remained at large until Thursday. Jawarski's brother, Sam, is now in the same prison. He is charged with smuggling the guns to his brother for the jail break.

The survivors of his gang had gathered here, Jawarski says, and were preparing to go to Pittsburgh with machine guns and rifles to "shoot Sam out of jail," when he was captured.

Friction developed between local authorities and Allegheny county officials last night. The Allegheny officers have already consented to discontinue their efforts to take Jawarski back to Pennsylvania. They will allow him to go to trial here. In return, Prosecutor Edward Stanton of Cleveland has tacitly agreed that if the gunman is not convicted and sentenced to the electric chair after his trial here, he will not attempt to prevent his return to Pennsylvania.

Criticize Pennsylvanians

Last night, Assistant District Attorney Andrew Park, of Allegheny county, asked Police Chief Jacob Graul for permission to question Jawarski about the Mollenaur robbery. Graul replied that in his opinion the Pennsylvania officials "didn't get much information from Jawarski" when they had him. He also criticized them for failing to take photographs and bertillon records of Vassbinder, a convicted murderer.

"I don't particularly like your attitude towards us," Park said.

Safety Director Ed Barry entered the dispute at this point.

"If you people don't like our attitude, then none of you are going to see him," Barry asserted. "We don't need any help from Allegheny county."

Arraigned Today

After his speedy indictment yesterday, Jawarski was to be arraigned, in the hospital, by Judge Walter McMahon, today. If he pleads not guilty to the charge of "murdering a policeman," his trial date will be set at about Oct. 15, Judge McMahon said.

Four employes of the Detroit News who came here yesterday in an attempt to identify Jawarski in connection with the News payroll holdup, failed to recognize him. Jawarski first admitted, then denied participation in this robbery.

When told that his sister, Mrs. Lucille Logan of Detroit, was coming here to see him, Jawarski did not seem particularly pleased. He said he would rather not be bothered by visits from relatives.

John Zavworsky, an old acquaintance of Jawarski's when they both lived in Butler, Pa., who recognized him in a little east side restaurant Thursday and telephoned police, has made no effort to claim the $5,000 reward offered for his capture. Chief Graul says he thinks Zavworsky is entitled to the reward.

Tips Prove Fruitless

A similar reward has been offered for Vasbinder's capture. Police have received a number of "tips" concerning his whereabouts, but all have proved fruitless. Jawarski first said Vasbinder was the man who fled the restaurant when the gun battle started, Thursday. Later he denied this. Police believe, however, that Vasbinder has been in the city and they are attempting to find the place where he and Jawarski lived.

Jawarski's condition was reported unchanged today. Patrolman Effinger is recovering, while Benjamin Majstrek, the bystander who was struck by one of Jawarski's bullets, intended for a policeman, still is in critical condition. Patrolman Wieczorek's funeral is to be held Tuesday.

Men of Marion to be Studies in Contrasts Wearing Latest Apparel, Survey of Clothing Stocks Reveals

BY HALLIE HOUCK

MEN are going to be studies in contrasts this fall and during the spring of 1929. The shelves and racks of local clothing stores verify this statement and allow one to broaden upon it.

The gay young Lotharo this season may be equally as gay at heart as before, and express this gayety in the trunks of his two piece underwear, but outwardly his appearance should contradict this lightness of heart.

Suits this fall and winter are of two styles, two-button coat, medium form fitting, peaked lapels, double breasted vests and pleated trousers, or else three-button suits with a wider lapel. The trousers are going to be a trifle narrower than those of several past seasons.

Caledonian stripes, with no reference to our neighboring town as a style center, but rather to the ancient name of Scotland, are in high favor in suits this year. While wide stripes rather contrastingly colored are being shown in the stores of Marion, these stripes are narrower and more conservative.

Prevailing Colors

Oxford greys, browns and some dark blues will be worn this year, with the greys and browns leading. To go with the suits men will wear black shoes preferably, with a slightly more pointed toe and a trifle higher leather heel. One enterprising young salesman in a local shoe emporium gravely stated that if Marion men would stick to style, they'd wear tan shoes until 6 o'clock in the afternoon and black after that. But what if you're standing on a street corner at 6 o'clock? The young man was style-right, though, but will it ever come to pass?

Some of the shirts worn will be of solid colors in green, blue and lavender and some may even shade into pink, with, of course, white for the conservative person. Green is not as good as it was in the spring and may die out entirely.

Pin stripes and cords are the thing to wear, though. Shirt patterns are not new, for almost every conceivable design has been used in past years, but each is being brought out with new colors and variations. Two stiff collars sold with each shirt, with long points, complete the picture as far as shirts are concerned.

Ties More Sedate

Since the shirts are taking on such a colorful note, the ties are being designed in a more somber note, with less blatant plaids and stripes. The "president's tie," a four-in-hand with a solid background and an eighth of an inch diagonal stripe, is being shown, along with the new color schemes and patterns. Four-in-hands will be much more popular, if indications now prove correct, than the butterfly and bow.

Young men have taken rather readily to the suspender idea, and as the season advances, the wildness in suspenders and matching garters increases even faster. Such colors would make the famous "coat of many colors" look like a dusty street.

Socks must be considered next. They fairly "knock your eyes out" if any number of them at all is displayed at one time. Odd, isn't it that ties beginning to look like ties and not circus pennants and socks are becoming "louder" with every shipment.

Topcoats Nifty

The topcoats seen on the local hangers are the niftiest array that has been seen for several seasons. Unlike the suits, they are light in color, again with grey and brown leading. Some dark ones are being shown, but again for the conservative man who does not buy a new outfit every winter, but selects with care so that he may be correctly and neatly apparelled for several seasons.

And to top off the ensemble, hats in light felts to match the topcoats, are being made either with "snap" or roll brims. And the brims are noticeably narrower than have been seen for some time. The man with the full face is going to have a hard time selecting a hat this fall.

Collar pins the cause of many an evening's agony of searching, are being shown and sold in the men's stores here, and although the pins have been predicted by several authorities with several thousands of inches between them and this city, Marion men are not rushing forward to follow the fad. It may "take" though, as the season advances.

Noisy Nighties

But underneath all of this finery, the male bursts forth into all of the idiosyncrasies of color that the haberdasher can sell him. The shirt to his "track suit" underwear is of a plain solid color, sometimes white, but the trunks. They look as if the manufacturer had bought all of the efforts of a struggling young futuristic artist and rather jumbled the mass into what he calls patterns. Try and find them—the patterns.

And at night in the wee sma' hours when the young blood finally decides to retire he dons "pyjamas." They can't be pajamas this season.

As one dealer said when questioned about the new styles and colors, "Well the boys won't need sleeves in their rooms this winter if they buy the pyjama patterns that are being shown."

In other words, the night wear is "hot," and how!

MORE PRAISE FOR ANOTHER NEWS PLAY

"The Front Page" Called Accurate and Furiously Paced by Correspondent

BY RUTH MORRIS
Star Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 15—All week long I've been building a soap box—a very neat little soap box, strong and steady—from which to declaim upon the subject of "indecency" in modern plays, a matter that seems at the moment to be troubling not only the press but that vigilant and worrisome body known as the district attorney's office.

"The Front Page," we hear, is under immediate supervision. Doubtless in the course of a few weeks some of the husker adjectives will be deleted from the manuscript — leaving the Hecht-McArthur piece no less vital or lusty than it was before. Indeed, you might take away every bit of bawdry bandinage from "The Front Page" and it still would remain a grand play, accurate and furiously paced. Its language is merely an appropriate color-note in a skilfully arranged background. Never once does it pause to leer over one of its verbal irregularities; it says what it has to say and rushes on.

Hence, to me, not one moment of the play was offensive. If it had been, I (as with everyone else in the audience) had the prerogative of taking my leave—and nothing could have driven me away.

Something Else

With "Heavy Traffic," the Arthur Richman comedy in which Mary Boland is the featured player, it was a different matter, however. I remained throughout three acts only in the role of a conscientious reporter. "Heavy Traffic" is a pretention at "high comedy" that imposes upon its characters the necessity of being brilliant about even such an amusing thing as a cup of tea. In moments it succeeds in being entertaining in spite of itself but, one suspects, only because of the excellent way it is handled by a group of, for the most part, charming actors and actresses.

My chief criticism of "Heavy Traffic" is with its manner of flaunting middle-aged lechery in a form calculated to draw forth nasty giggles and unbross guffaws. It details the story of Mrs. Rosalie West, proud proclaimer of the fact that her "reputation has been in shreds for years, and takes her through two love affairs—one with her husband's best friend, and the other with a young Italian musician—and gives promise of yet a third as the last curtain falls. Give me a hundred "Front Pages," lusty and sincere, to one "Heavy Traffic," posing as smart comedy and, in reality, just a nasty joke.

Mary Boland Good

A triumverate of excellent actors lent as much amusement as "Heavy Traffic" held—for one auditor, at least. Mary Boland handled the Rosalie West role accurately and with her usual display of a goregous comedy sense. Reginald Mason, as the husband quietly resigned to his wife's infidelities, was delightful, as was T. E. Matthews in a deplorably small role. And while we're on the subject of Mr. Matthews, be it reported that the stage has done very badly by him of late. Just because he can register charmingly in minor "rotter" roles, he seems to have been elected to them forever. It is to be hoped that his next play will do him justice—even though it takes a "Bull Dog Drummond" to bring him back to center stage.

To an audience made up of celebrities, visiting Mayfairites and resplendent evening array, "The High Road," the new Frederick Lonsdale comedy of English life, ran itself into a hearty first-night reception. But the enthusiasm shown Mr. Lonsdale after his nice curtain speech was, it is guessed, gives more on past performance than on anything strikingly meritorious in his current one. "The High Road" was clever and amusing—but not anywhere up to former Lonsdale plays. Its characters, marvelously acted by a deluxe cast, were pretty much "papier mache." Recounting the attempts of members of a titled English family to keep a London actress from marrying into their midst, it changes suddenly from a light comedy to a sad, wistful love tale that might have been thought better if its predecessors had not been so awfully good. But America has it to thank for bringing Miss Edna Best back to its shores. Miss Best, as the despised "stage person" who proves to her snooty prospective in laws just wherein real gentility lies, gave a genuine performance, thoroughly shorn of flourishes.

A Robust Chopin

The Shuberts recently have given to New York the picture of a remarkably robust Chopin who acts in the grand manner and touches top C without the slightest trace of a pulmonary ailment. The piece in which the tragic Pole thus disports himself, entitled "White Lilacs," has its musical score based upon beautiful Chopin themes—and in that, at least, it is to be respected, for the themes yield beautiful popular melodies and are handled well by a suave and supple orchestra.

Mme. Georges Sand, nicely accommodating to the talents of her portrayer, Odette Myrtil, obligingly became a violin virtuoso for the occasion and all was pleasantly temperamental and egotistic and melancholy on a stage peopled with Meyerbeer, Balzac, Heine and their contemporaries.

KIDNAPING CHARGED, CONFESSION IS MADE

Salvatore Mastroianni Held for Abduction of 10-Year-Old Billy Ranieri

Chicago, Sept. 15—Salvatore Mastroianni, erstwhile cammorist and black hand terrorist, was today formally charged with the kidnaping of 10-year-old Billy Ranieri, who mysteriously disappeared while on his way home from school here 10 days ago.

The booking of Mastroianni on the child-abducting charge followed his confession last night to Assistant State's Attorney Samuel Hoffman and Charles Mueller that he had acted as "runner" in dealings with the kidnapers who are holding the boy under threat of murder for a ransom of $60,000.

Renoldo "The Skid" Schiedo, another prisoner booked on the same charge is a former employe of Frank Ranieri, the lad's father.

Indication that Schiedo and Mastroianni might have made more admissions than announced was borne out when squads of detectives armed with riot guns and tear bombs, soon after the alleged confession sped to the northern section of the city without announcing their destination. It was generally rumored that they had learned the boy's hiding place and meant to rescue him.

Just Things

BY EDNA B. DUTTON

PONY RACES

The Prince of Wales would have been green, and all the rest of the colors of the rainbow, with envy, if he could have seen that gang of youngsters ride the ponies at the county fair yesterday afternoon. It was a real, honest-to-goodness race, the winner making the half mile in 1:25, and every one of the youngsters were in the saddle when they came under the wire at the finish. Of course, one or two of the ponies didn't take the race so seriously and ran out of every gate they came to but their riders made them right about face and do their stuff even if they did come in a little late. And don't think for one minute the boys had the whole thing to themselves. There was a little girl who was apparently as much at home in the saddle as you are in your favorite rocking chair and I feel quite certain that had she had a pony that wasn't so curious to see what was on the other side of the fence, she would have won the race, at least she would have been in the money. I can't make up my mind which I would rather be, the chap who won the race or the little, blue-eyed vendor of peanuts that trotted up and down the aisles in our section. Of course he didn't begin to get the show that the other chap did but I am quite certain that in his own mind he was quite as important as anything or anybody on the grounds for wasn't he wearing a belt to which was attached a holster and in this holster wasn't there a gun? There was only one time that I saw him when I thought he would rather be somebody else and that was when the pony race started. All the instructions about putting more force behind his speech to the public in regard to the merits of his wares, poured into his ears only a short time before by one of his lieutenants were forgotten, and I am afraid he would have traded belt, gun and the whole caboodle of peanuts for a seat in the race.

RULE FOR LIVING

You have your own little rules of life, I have mine and the other fellow has his but I think we all are interested to no small degree in the other fellows. This one was handed me as a pretty good one. I think so too, so will pass it along. "Give a little, live a little, try a little mirth sing a little, bring a little happiness to earth. Pray a little, play a little, be a little glad; rest a little, jest a little, if the heart is sad. Spend a little, send a little to another's door; give a little, live a little, love a little more."

NEIGHBORLINESS

Some people think of everything and some of us think of nothing except what is to be done at the present moment. And wouldn't the rest of us be in a pickle if it weren't for the ones who seem to remember everything? I went to the theater the other night and a patron in the row ahead of me dropped her hat. Without any ado another patron in the same row gave her the necessary assistance in finding it by producing a flashlight. It wasn't long until another patron in our row dropped something and the flashlight was pressed into service again. I was next but retrieved my chapeau in its descent to the floor but I feel quite certain that the flashlight would have been at my service as well, had the occasion demanded it; she seemed like that sort of a neighborly person. Of course in all three instances we might have summoned an usher but think of the commotion we would have caused and the "time out" we should have taken from the entertainment.

DRAMATIC STORY OF AMAZING ADVENTURE

BY WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

THE STORY SO FAR

Jim Renshaw, after several years in the far west, arrives in Chicago in old clothes, but with plenty of money. He registers at a smart hotel, buys expensive suits and goes to the theatre. By accident he sits next to Irene Delmar, society heiress of New York. In leaving the theatre she loses track of her father and mother—and Jim comes to her rescue.

He introduces himself, learns who she is, tells her he is going East and will have 50 or 60 thousand a year. Irene asks him to tell her about his experience in the west.

He explains that his uncle refused to send him to college and insisted upon his working in his paper factory, which he quit in disgust. Learning that he is to take the Century the next day she asks him to call on her family in their private car.

At the Grand Central, Jim meets Ralph Blake who, he learns, is engaged to Irene. He accepts an invitation to dine with the Delmars that evening.

A reporter calls on Jim and asks for his story.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER SIX

ODDLY enough, during the day, Jim Renshaw had given little thought to his meeting with Irene that night. So far as he had thought of the dinner engagement at her home at all, though, he had supposed that he had been bidden to a quiet dinner with the three Delmars.

They wouldn't have time, he imagined, to gather many people. And, for all he had read and heard, he still had only a real notion of what a New York apartment may be. For him an apartment was, definitely, a small, restricted dwelling—luxurious though it might be.

But when he entered the vast building covering a whole Park avenue block, and, at his inquiry for the Delmars, was led to what was obviously a special elevator, he began, almost at once, to revise his ideas. And gradually, in the first few moments after he left the elevator, he perceived the extent of his error.

The Delmars live in what was called an apartment, to be sure. But it was an apartment that spread itself out over the three topmost floors of the building, and it was larger than most mansions. It had not one, but several, private automatic elevators, to facilitate movement between floors. The dining room rose two stories high; the great music room, with its electric organ, three. There was no counting the rooms, the servants. Here was luxury on a scale of which he had never dreamed; his first real glimpse of it fairly took his breath away.

And he gasped, even before Irene came to greet him, at his presumption in ever daring to dream that she might, some time, come to think seriously of marrying him. He—why, even with the million that was the far, outer limit of his dream of wealth, he would be little better than a pauper beside these people. This apartment alone must represent a monthly expenditure as great as his yearly income would be, if it reached his hopes! Things he vaguely remembered having read about the Delmars had a new meaning for him now—the statement that the Delmars possessed one of the great American fortunes had a wholly new significance.

But then, with the resiliency of his youth, his mind came back. After all—there were few such fortunes. He was rich himself; not, perhaps, in relation to a fortune such as that of the Delmars, but in ordinary terms. Rich enough, at least, not to be accused of being a fortune hunter. And, after all, money made money—and he, with the money that he already had, could make more. Nor would he hesitate to do so, now that he saw he was going to have a real reason for doing so.

Irene, unconscious of his awe, so used to all this luxury that she never thought of it at all, of course, as he was shrewd enough to understand, completed his rehabilitation by her manner. She was unaffectedly glad to see him; though there was a spark of mischief in her eyes as she saw his swift glance at her left hand, she said nothing. But he observed, with a secret satisfaction, that its middle finger was still bare.

She wore few ornaments of any sort; her only jewels were the pearls about her neck and a single rather small ring.

"Heavens!" she said. "This party has just grown and grown—I don't think anyone knows who's coming! We'll probably have to send out for relays of food and extra chairs! People have been calling up all day, and I just asked them all to dinner—it seemed the simplest thing to do!"

"I'm sorry," he said, his courage restored. "I'd hoped—well, I can see it was absurd—"

"It wasn't—it was nice," she said. "Some other time—soon. Very soon. But tonight I really had to have a lot of people—they knew I was back, you see—"

He was shrewd enough, vain enough, too, perhaps—which was another way of putting it—to see that there was design, in a way, in this party. She wanted to see him against this dazzling background she had created; this background, that, long before he had said his say, began to form. He was, in a very real sense, on trial tonight. She wanted to know how he would conduct himself with other people of her sort; wanted to see how the men and the girls she knew would take him.

It was not, he understood, that she distrusted her own judgment; she would, in any case, trust that and depend upon it. But she wanted, and meant to have, abundant facts upon which to base it.

And, as the evening wore on, he was well satisfied. He got along well, at dinner, with the girls on either side of him. He could see, from the first, that, with the women, the very fact that nothing was known about him would help him, not hurt him. He stood by himself. Accepting him didn't mean that claims would be presented, later, in behalf of encumbering relatives or friends.

But with the men his lack of antecedents, in a social sense, was a different matter. Blake was, he thought, inclined to be both surly and suspicious—but that he could discount, because the man was jealous, and he was human enough to be pleased because he was. But the other men, in general, treated him with a certain reserve. They were pleasant enough, friendly enough, on the surface—but he understood perfectly that, for them, he was an outsider, and that that was more serious in their eyes even than in those of Irene or the other girls he had met.

Most of these men, he knew, had grown up together. They had either gone to the same schools, or to schools the traditional rivalry of which amounted to kinship. They had played with or against one another on teams at Harvard, Princeton, Yale. They were in the Seventh Regiment or Squadron A. They belonged to one or more of that small list of clubs that confer distinction on their members.

They might, in theory, be prepared to admit that a man who did not have their particular background might be all right. But, in practice, they would demand proof that he was: they wouldn't be prepared to take him for granted, as they would a man who qualified according to their own standards. Well—that was all right. He could furnish the proof they wanted, he thought, if they gave him time.

So far as money went, he thought, he was at least as well off as most of these men. Blake was, he suspected, really rich; he wasn't sure, but he meant to find out. But Blake, unless he were mistaken, was nearly, if not quite, in a class with the Delmars themselves. A lot of the others, though, probably weren't as prosperous as he was himself.

That no longer concerned him, though. Money needn't matter, unless you let it—provided, that is, you had enough, as he did, not to have to worry. But he did still worry about Blake, and he got his chance, just before he had to go to his train, to tell Irene that he did.

"You didn't tell me you were engaged," he said—not reproachfully, at all, but as one stating a fact.

"Well," she said. "Ralph hadn't reminded me lately, you see. And I'm shockingly forgetful about some things."

"Are you?" he asked.

"He says so!"

"But—"

"Oh, Jim—don't be silly! Suppose I did let him give me a ring? What's an engagement—nowadays? I've been engaged lots of times. Girls are always getting engaged. But I notice that very often girls get married without being engaged at all—to the men they marry, anyway!"

He had to be content with that. On the whole, he saw no reason why he shouldn't be.

In the station he bought a paper. Amused, he read Trowbridge's account of his arrival in New York. There was, beyond all doubt, a certain thrill about seeing one's self described, in print, as a millionaire!

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

TODAY is Saturday, and tomorrow is Sunday when I will get my face half washed off, and the next day I will have to go to school. I was telling Jubilee this morning when we woke up that he has got all the best of it. All he has got is fleas, and I have got an ant and have to go to school and everything.

I found out what Feeble wanted to say to me today. When I came out from straining my milk and feeding my face and was digging a couple of syrupy pancakes out of my pocket for Jubilee she came around the corner of the house and came to where I was at and said, "There has been a man watching my house nights, and I was leaning on my fence last night and he came up to me and said didn't I have a boy friend that would like to go for a ride in the country with him and me, and I told him I had a man friend that would remove his tousils for him if he didn't keep away from me." Then she told me to think that over and the next minute the bunch was around us and asting what we should do with our last Saturday, so we made it up to take the cows out and then go out to the river this side of the poorhouse and dive off of the railroad bridge, so the girls went home to get their old clothes on, only Feeble is the only one that knows how to swim, and when they got over to the vacant lot we got in behind the cows and we certainly made them walts along to the pasture and then we took a short swim in the creek, and then we went through the woods past Mud Turkle pond and down the truck, and Feeble kinda jerked her head and I looked around to see what she meant and there was a man with his cap pulled over his eyes, and I made out not to notice him, and we all skun out, and when we got to the railroad bridge we all sot down with our legs hanging over dasting each other to be the first one in, and pretty soon the man came up and stood back of me and said, "Hey, kid!" and I looked up, and he sood there just looking at my face and not saying anything, and then all at once he stumbled against me and went over my head into the river, and it was quite a ways to the water and he struck on his stummick, and we were all looking down to see if he knowed how to swim, and when he took his first stroke Feeble hollered, "Come on, you rummies," and that was one place we certainly skun out from.

When I went in to supper Annabelle Lee had clumb up on the table and sot in the gravy bowl and burnt herself and everyone was so excited I was let stay up quite a while after supper. My mother was mad at my aunt for not keeping her eye on Annabelle Lee. I wonder what the man wanted. I wish Jubilee was a bloodhound I'd put him on his trail.

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Comforted by Harry's Offer of Aid

"OH! my sanctified great grandmother!" Harry Underwood groaned as my angry astonished eyes met his. "Now I have put my foot right into the flower-border. Look here, Lady Fair, can't you consider that last foot question unsaid? Honest to Agnes, it just slipped out, because we were discussing Mary. I don't really believe that you're ruling your heart with your head and putting ambition before the Dicky-bird, and it wouldn't be any of my darned business if you were. Which particular way would you like me to do penance? Shall I walk on my hands the rest of the way home, or would you rather drag me at your chariot wheels in the dust or—"

"Oh, do shut up," I said crossly, angry at myself that I could not help laughing at his nonsense when, in reality, I was so thoroughly upset by his query. For the question he had half idly put when I had defended Mary for "ruling her heart with her head" had struck deep. Was that the "theory I was believing in now?" as he had said. Was I putting my ambition before my husband? Was that the subconscious reason for my defense of the attitude which I believed was Mary's toward Noel, Georges and her career?

"You should belong to the Inquisition," Mr. Underwood told me with a grin, "for you know you've chosen the one punishment which is the keenest torture to me. Let's get on home, for if I can't talk I shall expire right here at your feet and then you'll have a coroner's inquest on your hands."

I stooped to the switch key, still laughing, and sent the car on its way. Mr. Underwood did not speak again until we were almost at the house.

"Just one minute before we get there," he said, his voice serious. "Whether you're wrong or not about Mary—and I'm rather inclined to bank on the proposition that Noel means more to her than you think, I've got a hunch that it won't be a bad idea for old Doc Underwood to keep his eyes open when he's going to the mat with old Phil Veritaen this Winter."

"Mr. Veritaen?" I exclaimed involuntarily. Then I was furious at myself for the slip, for I did not wish Harry Underwood to guess that I already knew of the drama which he had sent to the great producer under another name and which Mr. Veritaen had recognized as his. Philip Veritaen had told me of it and asked me to tell Lillian in the days before the wanderer came back in such spectacular fashion. But I had heard nothing concerning the play since.

"Yes, I've got a hen on the nest over there," he said carelessly, "but the old boy and I are having a few little differences of opinion about the hatching. But what I'm getting at is this. If, at any time, anything which troubles you comes up in the three act romantic drama of Noel and Mary, remember I'm a play tinkerer—so called—and an S O S will bring me on the run. You don't understand? You don't need to, not until the time comes, if it does. Then you will."

He finished his cryptic utterance with one of his great laughs just as we turned in at the gate, leaving me thoroughly puzzled but with the comforting little conviction that I could indeed call upon him for aid and counsel in any emergency, and that he meant to keep some sort of watch upon Philip Veritaen's activities.

Jerry Ticker's small car had turned in the gate ahead of us, and I hurried to the rear of the house, for Jerry always brings our mail when he fetches that of his own family from the post office. Mary was standing by the [illegible] and was looking over the mail which he had just given her.

"Only one for me from Aunt Harriet," she said. "Will you take it to read, Auntie Madge?"

She handed me the letters and I noted that the envelope she held [illegible] of the heavy gray monogrammed [illegible] stationery which Harriet Braithwaite always used. Yes, this was the day of the week on which her letter and gift always arrived.

Your Money

In your sock is as an idle servant in your employ. You have it and yet it is not producing for you.

Money in itself is worthless unless it will buy the needs, the things you want or help you do things you want to do.

Why not place your surplus funds in this strong bank where they'll be working for you day and night, and where you'll find them when you have need of them.
